ELECTRICS TO BELMONT.

arlington May Be Connected with Sister Town by Trolley—The Plan Said To Be Under Consideration—Park Avenue the Line of Travel.

Time and again there have been rumrs current of a line of electrics running rom Arlington to Belmont, and this week the story has been circulated again with some possible reason for it. The rumor has it that a line is being talked f from Arlington Heights at Massachusetts avenue up the Park avenue road direct into Belmont. Whether this has been circulated in order to have a possible effect upon the value of property along the Mne of travel, or whether there is good foundation for the story, the Enterprise is not in a position to state definitely. It is known, however, state definitely. It is known, however, the project has been considered and is still under consideration, but further than that, as to what conclusions have been reached, is still kept in the dark. The plan has been talked of among the people at the Heights for the past few days, and a large number of people would welcome any such move in order to avoid the long, tiresome walk up to the top of the elevated portion of Arlington.

Mr. Powers is an employee of the firm of R. H. White & Co., of Boston, as driver of the Somerville team. Mrs. Powers has been an operator at the local telephone office during the past two years, and in that time has proven herself very capable and efficient in her work. She has tendered her resignation, however, to take effect Sept. I, and a large number of subscribers, while they wish her much happiness, regret the fact that she will be missed from central.

HAS RETURNED TO STAY.

Harry W. Berthrong, of Arlington, who for the past three years has been inspector of customs in Cuba and special agent of the treasury department when the Americans took control there, has returned to his home here to stay. He will resume his old work at the custom house in Boston, Sept. I, and the past few days he has been looking over the town and taking a rest. Thursday evening he attended the meeting of Francis Gould post, G. A. R., and made an address on his experiences and observations in Cuba. It was particularly interesting, and much enjoyed by all the comprades present.

tions in Cuba. It was particularly interesting, and much enjoyed by all the commades present.

When Mr. Berthrong accepted his position in the Cuban service, he did so with the understanding that he could return to his old position at the Boston custom house, but Mr. Berthrong says that if he were a younger man he would make Cuba his home. With American control—and he believes it to be inevitable—he thinks that there will be great opportunities for Americans with push and brain and a little capital.

While in Cuba, he has been located at Matanzas, and has enjoyed himself while there. He was in high favor with the officials, and it was only with difficulty he broke away from his triends there.

Mr. Berthrong granted an interview.

there.

'Mr. Berthrong granted an interview, yesterday morning, to an Enterprise man, and told about some of the interesting conditions in Cuba. He says the party in power at present does not have any too much love for the Americans, for it seems to fear aggression on the part of the latter. He considers the worst element is now in power in Cuba, and the men of means and education are in the background. The members of the and the men of means and education are in the background. The members of the constitutional convention, are not all very capable men and they represent the scum of Cuban people. Mr. Berthrong thinks the men who really look for the welfare of the island are after office and boodle are crying for independence. Of course the latter class is in the vast majority, and home rule; stheir watchword. The Spaniards know the only hope for themselves is American control, for when the natives get control they will tax the Spanish people to death.

control they will tax the Spanish people to death.

Mr. Berthwrong, as may be judged from his statements, is an advocate of annexation, and says the Cubans would be law-abiding and peaceful if under American control. They could be easily handled by the American government. He believes the question of annexation a commercial question rather than a political question, and that annexation would have been a fact by this time had it not been for the commercial interests which are fostered by a tariff wall between the two countries. The sugar and tobacco interests of this country will which are fostered by a tariff wall between the two countries. The sugar and tobacco interests of this country will fight against annexation with its attendant free commerce.

The Cuban press is coming over to the side of the annexationists, according to the views of Mr. Berthrong. Some of the papers which have been bitterly opposed to the plan are now becoming more or less indifferent to it. They are beginning to see what will be the effect of Cuban rule. The schools will go to smash, the treasury will be looted, and the sanitary conditions will be allowed to deteriorate. When asked what he thought of Gen. Gomez, he said the general was a fine patriot, and deserves to be the first president of the republic. Gen. Wood, who was at first attacked by Cubans generally, has been getting into the good graces of the people by ms fair-minded policy. He has used no influence either in favor of annexation or against it, has allowed things to take their own course, and has not interfered ror advised the people in their electoral deliberations. In this way he has been gaining the confidence of the people every day. It is expected the Cubans will be given the reins of government Feb. 24, the anniversary of the declaration of war against Spain. The people are looking forward to this day with much interest, when they will truly be free and independent.

Mr. Berthrong is looking as though he had been in the best of health while in independent.

Mr. Berthrong is looking as though he had been in the best of health while in Cuba, and he speaks in glowing words of the climate. It has been hotter in Arlington this summer than in Cuba, he says.

Mr. Berthrong is one of the best known men in the custom service, and is also noted all over the country as a crayon artist. For years he has had the contracts of the Republican and Democratic national campaign committees for making portraits of presidential candidates. In his younger days he was one of the best bail players in the country, and his record for running the bases, made way back in the 60s, while playing with the old Nationals of Washington, still stands. He is just as big a base-ball crank as ever, and says he organized and played with a team in Matanzas, that trimmed all comers on the island.

SOLD DRUGS 17 YEARS.

H. A. Perham of Arlington Has Good Two Lexington Families Engage in Prescription, Cigar and Soda Business-Well Known in Lexington Where He Once Operated a Store.

It is not every man who at the age of years has as good a store and as good a trade as does Druggist Henry A. Perham, of postoffice block, Arlington. Starting in the business while young, he has built up a trade here by hard work and application, in a short time. Mr. Perham has been located here only four years, yet his place of business is known to everyone. His trade has grown steadily during that time, which speaks as a testimonial in itself. While he makes prescriptions his specialty, he does a large business in soda and cigars. Mr. Perham was born in Pittston, Me.

Oct. 19, 1865, but received his early edu-cation in the neighboring town of Wake-field. Later he attended the Pittston academy and the Kent's Hill school at

H. A. PERHAM.

Mt. Vernon, Me. In 1884 he began learning the drug trade in a store in Gardiner, Me., and remained there three years. He then came to Massachusetts and was employed in a number of prominent drug stores, remaining one year in Malden and then coming to Arlington, where he served in the capacity of drug clerk two years for O. W. Whittemore. From Arlington he went to Lexington and started a store himself, June 12, 1890. Six days later a fire broke out and destroyed a large part of his stock, but in two days' time he was again doing business. During the fire he severely burned his foot, and for several months was obliged to go about on crutches, but, nothing daunted by his misfortune, he clung to his post. In 1891 he received a diploma as a registered pharmacist from the state board of pharmacy of Massachusetts.

Perham remained in Lexington Mr. Perham remained in Lexington eight years, when he sold out his business to O. G. Seeley, of Lexington, who still conducts it. The year previous to this, Mr. Perham had opened his store in Arimston, and he then decided to devote all his time to the one town. Although not a member of any club tr society, Mr. Perham is well known socially and in a business way. He married Miss Emma Allen, an Arlington lady, in 1896, and they live at their pleasant home at 406 Massachusetts avenue.

DOG KILLS NINE FOWLS.

Stephen B. Manning of Lexington Loses Some Fine Poultry—Culprit Un-

Stephen B. Manning, of Lowell street, ost nearly all his fine fowls Saturday night by the depredations of a dog. When Mr. Manning went to the hen coop Sunday morning to feed the flock a wretched sight met his eyes. There were turkeys to the right of him, hens to the left of him and chickens in front of him, all lying stark and cold. Three one birds with sorrowful faces perched on the top of the roost and gazed at their dead comrades without moving a muscle. Occasionally they would cackle muscle. Occasionally they would cackle to themselves as if wondering if their turn was soon to come, but as Mr. Manning could not interpret what was said he started in to investigate the cause of the massacre. He quickly discovered dog tracks in the yard, and upon careful examination of the tracks, made up his mind the guilt was centered in a single dog.

his mind the guilt was centered in a single dog.

Mr. Manping started for the center, where he notified the officials and the town will therefore be obliged to settle the bill. The fowls were all good ones and the owner took considerable pride in them. There were just 47 dead ones lying about the yard. One by one the birds were picked up and buried, and should the identity of the dog be learned it is expected he will be given a lot of ground near the chickens he loved so well. The money which will be paid to Mr. Manning for his loss will come out of the dog tax as provided by law.

ALL FOR LOVE OF A CAT.

Mix-up Over Decease of Feline-A Boy Charged with Killing the Cat—One Mar Wears Black Eye.

Lexington family troubles will be aired in the district court at Concord today with Terrence Connors behind the rail. There will be a large attendance of the Connors family and a sprinkling of Woodwards present. Terrence is charged with assault and battery upon Arthur D. Woodward, and thereupon hinges a tale of woe. The family of Mr. Connors and that of Mr. Woodward reside in the same house on Massachusetts evenue, Lexington, near Spaulding's store, but there is no friendship existing between them. The Woodward family has owned and brought up a handsome cat which was the pride of the house, that is, on the Woodward side of the dwelling. The feline was not beloved by the Connors, and the latter claim the animal was prowling about their apartments oftener than was agreeable. Edward Connors, a son of Terrence, is said to have declared more than once that the cat must die, and he would be the executioner. Whether this is so or not is not absolutely known, but yesterday morning when Mrs. Woodward went out of her back door, the family cat was stretched out at full length under the stoop. The creature was dead, and had evidently met a violent death. The entire Woodward family was quickly informed of the death, and it was declared that young Connors was responsible for it. This quickly reached the ears of Mrs. Connors, who started for the Woodward side of the house in company with young Edward. They opened the door and walked in, demanding way such stories were being circulated about the young man. For several minutes there was considerable strong talk indulged in, and matters were getting decidedly warm when Terrence Connors himself put in an appearance. He did not walt long before he took a hand in the affair, and, according to the story of the Woodward amily, he made a lunge at Mr. Woodward, and seized him by the coat, which he almost tore from his shoulders. Woodward turned about to defend himself when Connors struck out with his fist, taking his opponent a cut in the eye, which gave it a blackish hue for the rest of the day. The skirmishers were then parted, and as soon as the Connors had left, Mr. Woodward and wife had told the story to Chief of Police Franks. He told them if they wished to proceed further in the matter to make a complaint at the court in Concord, which was done yesterday forenoon. The warrant was served for the arrest of Connors, and, as above stated, the affair will be aired fully before the judge this forenoon. The cat will not be a witness. between them. # WAKEFIELD WINS GAME.

WAKEFIELD WINS GAME.

The Arling A. A. baseball team suffered defeat at the hands of the Wakefield aggregation of stars last Saturday in Wakefield. The score was 4 to 2. The game was one of the best seen this year in Wakefield, for after the first inning, when the home team rolled up threef runs on errors and a bad throw, they scored but once. One of the leading features of the game was a great catch by Quinn in center field, when the attempt was apparently a hopeless one. Shean was in the box and made a good record against the old rivals. Abbott pitched a pretty game. Another game between the two nines will be arranged for in the near future. The Arlington boys will play at Norwood today.

REAL ESTATE SALES.

Edward T. Harrington & Co. report the sale of the attractive estate numbered 53 Jason street, Arlington, for Lena L. Munch to Edward J. Sargent. The lot of land in the premises contains 34,000 square feet, and the dwelling thereson is an old Colonial house of ten rooms, one of the finest on the street. The estate is assessed for $9800, but the price paid was in excess of that amount. The sale of the Alvin Neal estate at Lexington, has been closed, through the office of Edward T. Harrington & Co. This property, which is one of the most attractive of the many old Colonial houses in Lexington, is located on Massachusetts avenue near Monroe station; the house was built 104 years ago, but has been modernized; there is a large stable, and the land has an area of about two acres. It is assessed for $800. The buyer is Alfred Pierce.

STORY OF A DEAD DOG.

Officers Hooley and Duffy, of the po-lice force, were hastily summoned to Spy pond Saturday afternoon to fish out lice force, were hastily summoned to Spy pond Saturday afternoon to fish out of that body of water what was supposed to be a human being tied up in a bag. About 5 o'clock, some boys who had been fishing there came up to the police station with the information that a man in a bag had been discovered by them. This was enough to start the officers off at a good clip, and both felt as though this would culminate the long list of sensational features which have made Arlington noted the past few months. They reached a point near the Belmont shore, being guided thither by the boys who had given the information. There was the bag with its ghastiy burden, and it was soon brought to the land. Carefully it was opened, and there was the dead victim. It was not a man, however, but a dog. It was a large, heavy animal, and had been weighted down with two large stones. Despite the weights, however, the body had risen to the surface. It did not take the officers long to perform the burial services, for the odor was not of the best, and the crowd of small boys and other spectators who enjoyed the scene from a distance was not over pleasing to the preservers of the peace. No post mortem examination was thought necessary, but the officers would like to know who put the officers would like to know who put

ICES IN SMALL QUANTITY.

How to Use a Freezer - Things to Learn About Creams and Ices.

Very likely the ice cream freezer in the reader's home is a machine capable of freezing three, four or five quarts. Set it away till a day when you entertain company and purchase a one quart freezer. In the summer a dessert can be prepared in the quart freezer with a piece of ice no larger than you put into the water pitcher simply by the aid of newspaper. Pound the ice almost to a dentist, "don't you think I ought to have mush, for in a small freezer there is little space between the bucket and the can. I made a bag out of an old rubber blanket. It is waterproof, and none of the moisture oozes away. I put the ice in the bag and reduce it with a large wooden mallet.

Before I begin to use the freezer I have the mixture to be frozen ready plied the future walking delegate at the and perfectly cold. First I set the can in its place in the bucket. Then I fix the dasher in place, pour in the mixture, fit the can in the socket and turn the crank a few times to see if it is all right. Afterward I put in the ice and salt, allowing three measures of ice to one of salt. Measure it in a dipper and measure correctly, or you will not secure the correct degree of cold. If your supply of ice is limited, tear newspaper into bits and scatter it in small bunches through the ice and salt, tucking it in lavishly when you reach the top of the can. If you are making a frappe or mousse, mix equal parts of salt and ice. Use a wooden spoon to pack the ice > in solidly. Turn the crank slowly and steadily to expose as large a surface as possible to the ice and salt. When the crank begins to turn less easily, work faster, adding more salt and ice if necessary. Fifteen minutes' work generally freezes the contents of a quart can. When the crank has to be pushed laboriously, draw off the water, wipe every morsel of salt and ice from the lid, remove the dasher and with a spoon pack the frozen mixture solid. Put a cork that fits perfectly into the hole in the lid and rub with lard the edge of the cover and the place where it comes. That precaution allows no salt water to leak into the frozen mixture. Repack the freezer, this time using four measures of ice to one of salt, and allow the cream at least one hour to ripen. Cover it with an old blanket, a bit of carpet or newspapers.

> To serve remove the can, hold it under a faucet and let cold water wash off all the salt and ice: then place either on a chilled platter or in small dishes. In warm weather I usually set the sherbet cups or ice cream saucers in the refrigerator before I begin serving a meal in which the ice forms a

To the foregoing, in Good Housekeeping, the author appends a simple recipe for lemon ice and some further hints, as follows:

Make a sirup of two cups of boiling water and one cup of sugar, letting it boil 20 minutes. When you take it from the fire, add eight tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Allow it to cool, then freeze.

Orange ice is made in exactly the same way, using two cups of water, one cup of sugar, one cup of orange juice, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and the grated rind of a fine fresh orange. By using dark hued blood oranges you have a delicious pomegranof a watermelon.

With Thread and Shuttle.

A pattern for the pretty collar points now so much worn occurs in The Designer:

Materials.-No. 70 lace thread, two shuttles and 15 inches of No. 2 satin ribbon

Begin with the wheel and make it as follows: 8 p with 2 d s between, close, tie and cut the thread. Then 2 d s, p, 2 d s, foin to p of the ring, 2 d s, p, 2 d s, close, fasten on the second thread and make a chain of 4 d s, 5 p with 2 ds between, 4 ds. Alternate the rings and chains until eight of each are center.

Join three of the wheels into a group, as seen in the illustration, and in the space between make a four ringed figure, each ring of 7 d s, 5 p with 3 d s between, 7 d s, join 3 of the rings to the Broadway and Third Street, chains of the wheels. Make four of the groups of wheels and join two for each side of the collar.

Sew the lace to the ribbon, leaving one inch of space in front between the sections. Instead of the ribbon a narrow strip of lawn may be used as a foundation, or a stock collar of velvet er silk may be made and the points tacked upon it. Cuff points may be made in the same way as those for the collar. Knitting silk may be used to make the points instead of thread, and the collar and cuffs may then be made in black or color.

Potato Chowder.

To make a potato chowder boil together seven potatoes and three small onions, and when they are done rub them through a strainer. A quart of milk should then be scalded and a tablespoonful of butter added and the petatoes stirred in.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

Ingenious Treatment by Which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Noxious Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and under-stood that Drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periedical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of meutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure them-selves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonder-ful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker.

Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men, WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS! This remedy is in no sense a nostrum but a specific for this disease only, and is so skillfully devised and prepared that is so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a sup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they diser tea, and believe today that they discontinued of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of mold at the extremely low-price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of everybody a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 and $50. As a general rule, women peglect looking after health conditions in hot weather. There should be a quick cold bath in the morning, nice cool fresh linen, a speedy and limited hair curling, a careful soothing of the complexion with creme marquise or cucumber milk and a cowning that is comfortable, rational and in season. Nice crisp little muslins and dimities are beautiful except when they are worn down town. Then they are slimpy, dusty, grimy, stringy rags. Never use soap and water on your face during the day, for that will simply howl to the freckles: "Come on! You're welcome." Bathe your face with a cleansing lotion, like cucumber milk, and wipe the skin with a good old powder rag. Just before dinner freshen yourself that way. At bedtime take a quick scrub with tepid suds and a bath brush, comb out your tangled locks, read a few chapters in some good book, drink a big glassful of cool milk and go to bed early. Late hours are very bad in hot weather. Start in the day feeling tired, and by noon you will look 79. As for the important matter of eating, what is better than crackers and milk, or a dish of fresh raspberries, or a crisp little lettuce salad, or fine sandwiches of palatable chicken, ham or crisp bacon? Call a halt on ice cream soda and the drinks that make you dream in the night and set your teeth on edge.

Dress Reformer.

Miss Susan P. Flower of New Jersey was the first woman to adopt the bloomer costume. She was born in Amesbury, Mass., 78 years ago and in her youth was considered a belle. She was a schoolteacher many years ago and a personal friend of the poet Whittier. Later, at Vineland, N. J., Miss Flower made her debut upon the stage. and in the role of an ultra fashionable woman, wearing a decollete gown with long train and balloon sleeves, she was considered the handsomest woman in the opera house. Miss Flower is a farmer, and, although she only weighs 84 pounds, she accomplishes as much work as any ablebodied man. While at workshe wears a close fitting jacket, pantaloons and kilts. While plowing, chopping wood, etc., she tucks her pantaloons in her high boots. This costume is not a fad with Miss Flower. but was adopted for convenience while engaged in her farm duties, and she advocates such a custume for young girls especially.

Queen Ranavalo's Gown.

That a queen needs costly raiment is a conclusion every one will admit, but that she should have it even if the money to pay for it is raised by public subscription is another matter. Queen Ranavalo, not so long ago ruler of Madagascar and whose permanent residence is in Algiers, was permitted by the French government to visit Paris for a few weeks. One day madame the queen came across a black satin gown in one of the shops. It was a beautiful creation, but ont thing stood in the way of its passing into her possession, and that was the lack of money to purchase it. The antiministerial faction heard of her sad plight and started a subscription to purchase the pretty dress for Ranavalo. Deputies, councilors and ordinary citizens contributed. The gown was presented to the queen, and if the government was annoyed madame at least was pleased. -Harper's Weekly.

Shopping Hints. The woman who goes frequently picnicking should lay in a stock of aluminium spoons.

Water colors are best framed in hard wood of a natural dark green or old oak shade.

To whiten the hands use a lotion made of two ounces each of lemon juice, bay rum and rosewater. A late innovation in carpet sweepers is one that has a plate glass top.

It is a very reckless damsel who wears a plume laden Gainsborough hat to the seashore.

Black and white striped silk is fashionable again and is considered especially modish as a trimming on linen gowns.

Shirt waists and separate skirts are not so much seen, dresses all of one color being more popular.

Women Drug Clerks.

It-is a fact not generally known that there are nearly 400 women pharmacists in the United States. One of the largest apothecary establishments in New England employs women almost exclusively, giving them precedence over men and assigning as the reason therefor that women can be depended on, or, to use the language of the head of the concern, "no big heads, no mistakes, hence no suits for damages, as the result of careless reading of prescriptions." Many manufacturing chemists employ women in different capaci-

A "Lucy Stone Room."

Mrs. Mary B. Whiting and her daughters, Anna M. and Susan A. Whiting, have given $100 apiece to open and furnish a "Lucy Stone room" as a reading room in the girls' dormitory of Lincoln Memorial university at Cumberland Gap, Tenn. Gifts of books, good pictures or additional furnishings or the money to provide them may be sent to Miss Susan. Whiting, who says, "No one ever worked harder for an education than Lucy Stone, and no one bet-ter deserves such a memorial."

An English Idea.

A women writers' club of England has introduced a new idea at its dinners. It is the fashion for every one present to pin her name card, daintily hung on a slender ribbon attached to a safety pin, to her bodice, so that any one in the room can see her name. This is sufficient introduction for two women to make themselves known to each

THE LIFE OF WATCHES.

Influences and Conditions That Af-

They are delicate, they run well only when in perfect order, and they require attention once so often, whether they stop or not. They become sick, in a way, as we do, and they get off their balance. But, unlike us, when their Like many others of the argonauts, he mainspring breaks they are not necessarily done for unless in another world. They can have new mainsprings. We can't.

"Watches, all jokes aside, are really almost human sometimes. They take cold readily. Never lay a watch on a cold marble table or near an open window all night after you have worn it next to your warm body all day. It will contract a sort of pneumonia, and ten to one it will stop before long if the practice is continued. The cold contracts the metal pivots, which, small as they are, must not be smaller, and they shrink. Thus the wheels cannot move.

"Watches are magnetized, too, by the persons who wear them. I have seen the statement that watches vary in time keeping with the health of the wearer and that if changed from one person to another they will also show slight variations. All of that is true. The static electricity of a person may affect a watch. All of us throw this off-some more than others. Dark persons give off more than light ones do and a dark woman more than any one else. Dark women should have rubber cases for their watches if they wish to have them keep perfect time.

The Chinese appetite seems to demand boiled or steamed food rather than baked. Hence very little foreign flour is baked into bread for Chinese consumption.

Cooking Your Goose,

The phrase, "I'll cook your goose for you," originated in this manner: Eric, king of Sweden, coming to a certain town, besieged it, but, having few soldiers, was obliged to desist. The inhabitants in derision hung out from the walls a goose on a pole. Later Eric returned with re-enforcements and in reply to the challenge of the heralds observed that he had come "to cook their goose for them" and proceeded to storm the town and make it hot for the inhabitants.

A Nine Days' Wonder. To say that a thing is a "nine days' wonder" means that we regard it as a wonder for nine days, and then our eyes are opened to the fact that it is no wonder at all. This saying is based on the fact that kittens and pupples are born blind, and their eyes open at the end of nine days, and implies that people are blind with astonishment for nine days, and then their eyes open and they are undeceived.

FIRST LADY OF CALIFORNIA.

Charming Wife of the Chief Executive of the Golden State,

Francesca Raines Gage, wife of Governor Henry T. Gage of California, is a native daughter of the Golden State, On her mother's side she is descended from one of the most prominent famflies of the early Spanish settlers of Los Angeles. Her father was one of the American pioneers of California. married one of the handsome senoritas for whom the province of California was noted when it was still a dependency of Mexico. This commingling of Anglo-Saxon and Spanish blood has produced women of a beautiful type, of which Mrs. Gage is a fair specimen.

Mrs. Gage was born on her father's ranch near Los Angeles about 40 years ago. She spent her girlhood in the city of Los Angeles and vicinity and was educated in the public and private schools of Los Angeles county. When scarcely out of her teens, she met and became affianced to Henry T. Gage, who was then a youthful member of the Los Angeles bar, with his fortune yet to make. Their marriage resulted after a short courtship, and the union proved a most happy one. Mr. Gage gradually rose to eminence in his profession and accumulated considerable property. Governor and Mrs. Gage have two children, a son aged 15, who is an invalid as the result of an injury received while playing, and a charming little girt, Lucille, aged 8, who is the pride and joy of the executive man-

A Summer Luxury.

There is no more potent beautifier known than the Turkish bath, and, taken with moderation, it is productive only of beneficial results. Unfortunately, a large class of persons whose slender purses will not permit the necessary expenditure are deprived of not only a positive enjoyment, but a decided benefit, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Could its therapeutic value be more widely known possibly tired and nervous humanity would spend less in tonics and more in the indulgence of what is erroneously regarded as but a luxury for the classes, but which, by liberal patronage, should be brought within the limit where it would become a necessity for the masses. "Cleanliness is next to godliness." The consummate nurity and cleanliness of son which results from a Turkish bath produces a lightness and elasticity as well as a state of mental and moral purification which makes one feel "a little lower than the angels." Women In Medicine.

A significant step in the progress of woman in the medical profession is her admission to the British Gynecologic society. The council of this organization distributed a circular letter among the fellows to ascertain whether or not they were adverse to the admission of women into its ranks. Of the 328 fellows 172 replied that they were in favor of welcoming women, 55 were opposed to the proposal, 3 were indefinite, and 98 did not reply. In consideration of this result the council passed a resolution in favor of welcoming women practitioners into the society provided any of them may be duly elected fellows. The Obstetrical Society of Edinburgh has for some time admitted women into its ranks. England has been a little behind America in according to woman her full rights and privileges in these associations.-American Medicine.

How Mrs. Palmer Escaped.

Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago, while in New York city recently, found her portrait on the advertising literature of a new face powder. She wrote to the firm, telling it if the picture was not removed she would sue. She received this terse reply: "We advertised for a photograph and the name of the best known American woman except Mrs. McKinley. The majority of the names sent in was yours. If you sue us, we will get more than any damages we would have to pay you in free advertising by being sued by the 'best known American woman.'" Mrs. Palmer was saved the solution of a vexing question by the failure of the firm.-New York Times.

Why should we care to save the horse from the heat of the summer time, only to be stabbed to death during the whole year round if he should attempt to enter the cornfield?

This barbed wire fence is an accursed of barbarism. We don't want to hear that man at his morning family de votions who will put about field or pas ture this cruel invention for the dis comfort and slaughter of animal life. We wouldn't give a fig for that religion which does not take into kindly consideration in every way the comfort and safety of the entire animal creation.

HOME WEEK.

"Home week" is being observed in three of the New England states with a greater zest than heretofore. It was only the other day that one hundred and twenty-five of the solid business men of Boston Vermonters by birth, went back to their native state to help celebrate and join in this annual coming together of the children. Maine and New Hampshire are also keeping open house for the absent boys and girls. So long as the home is kept intact and held in loving reverence, there can be little or no danger coming either to the individual or to the state. The first organized life of which we read is that of the home, and this God himself instituted. The scriptural reading is: "Male and female created He them, and He called their name Adam." The entire oneness of the household is shown in that the same name was given to both the male and the female. It doesn't so much matter what exciting political differences shall come into our American life, so long as the home shall enter into it as a ruling

This annual coming together of the children under the paternal roof is a warranty of our future as a country. Both the public school and the church will do their work so long as the home shall survive and thus make sure domestic life. Home work is a worthy tribute of affection and love to "Home

That man is seldom or never foun4 who has not been compelled once and over again to impatiently exclaim to his wife or other, "do hurry up or otherwise we shall be late.'

As much as we love womankind, we must nevertheless accept the fact and state it in bald English that, as a rule, a woman is never ready at the appointed hour. As near as she may come to being ready, there is still that annoying last thing to do. It is oftentimes to find her one missing glove, or it may be to spend an extra five minutes in buttoning her gloves, or as it not infrequently happens, a longer or shorter delay is made in more carefully adjusting her hat, or in arranging her hair, and so on through the entire list of extra fixings preparatory to starting out with her good husband or "best fellow." "Wait a minute" is the cry of the coming woman. No wonder that we men get out of all patience and oftentimes forget our Christian vows, while waiting for the woman we love best. Why not hurry up, "dear one," and so keep the man of the house in good nature? Why not be ready at the appointed hour to take the arm of your gallant and so be off on time? But then, man has always waited for woman, and what is more, disagreeable as it may be, he will continue to wait a good deal satisfied if she will only come at last. #### THOSE THREE BROTHERS.

It is one of the most remarkable facts n all history that we Americans can race back our ancestry to those "three' historic brothers who came over the waters so many years ago, and settled in different parts of the country. Mind you that it is in every instance just three brothers, no more nor no less. There must have been in those earlier days some mathematical law observed in the creation of man, which has now become obsolete in these latter days. And yet this wonderful historic affirma tion of the "three brothers" is without oundation in fact. History will lie and does lie more or less frequently, as the ase may require. This three brother story has been told so often that we have all come to believe it true, et it is unquestionably a myth. course, true that somebody came over from across the then "dreary waste of waters," and that as a consequence and a sequence we are here. But it is absolutely wicked and moreover a scandal to make those three brothers father more than seventy millions of American men and women. During the past week the "Batchelders" held their family reunion in Vermont and their progenitors, the three brothers, came in for their meed of filial love. It is only a year or two ago that the "Palmers" did the same thing, and now we learn that the "S-agraves" are arranging for an early date when they shall sing praises to the triple brothers, and so it goes through our entire American family life. O, how we do pity those "three brothers." Their burden is greater than they can well

WHY DO IT? Why should one lumber himself down and fret himself well nigh to death with useless baggage while on his summer vacation? A teacher in the Friends' colege at Providence, R. I., once told us that the most enjoyable visit he ever made across the waters was that withut any especial preparation made for it. 'Why," said he, "I didn't give my trip nardly an hour's previous thought before starting on the journey. I Just packed my gripsack and went, not standing on order of my going," and then he added. "What a delightful time I did have in making England, Scotland and Italy, without a trunk to check!" truth is, the most of us make hard, anxious work out of what should be our most enjoyable pleasures. Many a man and especially many a woman come home from their summer outing more completely worn out than when they started on their vacation. An open house for friends either at the shore or at the mountains means, for the mistress of the house, the hardest kind of work. Rest, such as recuperates, can only come to one who is in a large way free from are and anxiety. If one is to be continually planning how they may entertain during the summer vacation, then much the wiser thing to do is to stay at home. The term "vacation" carries its own derivative meaning. To vacate, is to take yourself apart from the crowd, You must not be weighed down during what should be your leisure days, with lots of baggage. Just pack your grip sack and go, leaving orders at your postoffice that no mail be sent you during your absence from home. Rest is what you need, and this you cannot have in your "glad vacation time" if your latch string hangs out for the pull of your many summer friends. Hie away and don't tell anyone where you are going and by all means leave your trunk at

THE SENATORSHIP.

Some interest is being felt in the third Middlesex senatorial district, composed of Somerville, Arlington and Belmont, over the succession to the seat of Hon. Franklin E. Huntress, who has served the customary two years and will not be a candidate for re-election. It is the general impression that the voters will select Dr. Horace C. White of ward 1, Somerville, who served in the house four years and in 1900 was chairman of the committee on metropolitan affairs.

White of ward 1, Somerville, who served in the house four years and in 1900 was chairman of the committee on metropolitan affairs.

The one burning issue in Somerville and Cambridge is the proposed boulevard to connect the northern and southern metropolitan park systems, and probably no one in the district is better acquainted with matters of that nature than Dr. White. He secured the appropriation of $10,000 for the survey of the proposed boulevard, and he has kept thoroughly in touch with metropolitan matters to date.

Were Dr. White not in the field Representative William L. Barber, a member of the committee on metropolitan affairs might be a candidate, but Mr. Barber declined to oppose Dr. White and will be returned to the house if he cares to be. The chief opponent of Dr. White is ex-Representative Leonard B. Chandler of ward 5, Somerville, who served three terms in the house, ending in 1889, and rendered Speaker Bates yeoman service in always standing ready to move the previous question.

Mr. Chandler made an active campaign for a place in the executive council to succeed Oliver H. Durrell, but the legislators preferred Henry D. Yerxa, and Mr. Chandler is now displaying the same political agility he exhibited in that contest. Ex-Representative Joseph J. Giles of ward 2. Somerville, is, as usual, a candidate for senator, this time upon a "boulevard issue" which is understood to relate to the route which the proposed parkway shall take.

A fourth (contingent) candidate is Representative J. Howell Crosby of Arlington and Relmont delegations if he needs them, but whose only chance would appear to exist in the possibility that the convention will be unable to decide between Dr. White and Mr. Chandler.

These two towns are entitled to six and three delegates respectively, one more for Arlington than last year. Arlington has, to fact, as many delegates as any ward of Somerville except 3 and 7, and more than either ward 1 or 2. The representation in the senatorial convention will be as follows:

BY FOUR GENERATIONS.

Stage Driving Hereditary in New Hampshire-Rain Continues to Follow the Editor-Notes and Anect-

Whiteface, N. H., Aug. 13, 1901.

Dear Enterprise:—A duil, cloudy mornig and the mountains are lost to view so that we do not feel at our best in the line of letter writing, and yet these weekly communications must not fail, even for once, for we promised our readers before making our exit from Arlington that no issue of the Enterprise should make its appearance without our tow. So rain or shine, or whether these mountains come to us with their good cheer and inspiration or not, we must write all the same. And first of all we are to tell you, dear Enterprise, something about four generations of stage drivers, who for a hundred years have mountainous hills, conveying their precious freight of humanity safely to various points of destination. Samuel Gilman, long ago deceased opened the stage line somewhere about the year 1800, from this town of Sandwich to Dover, N. H., and for years drove over the route with that regularity and care that distinguished him throughout all New England as one who always got his passengers there on time. A man genial in his naguished him throughout all New England as one who always got his passengers there on time. A man genial in his nature and possessed of a rare fund of anecdote, Mr. Gilman never failed to eatertain. It was his boast that he had more than once had Daniel Webster, Rufus Choate and others of like intellectual caliber as passengers. It will be remembered that Webster and Choate were the most intimate of friends and were in each other's company as frequently as possible—each admired the other, though in many ways they were greatly unlike. Webster was passionately fond of out door life; he loved the streams and the wood and the farm, and was never happier than when with his ly fond of out door life; he loved the streams and the wood and the farm, and was never happier than when with his cattle on his farm at Marshfield. It is told of Webster how he delighted, when home from Washington, to arise as early as five o'clock of a winter's morning and go to his barn to feed corn to his cattle. It was during one of his winter vacations from his cares of state, as the story has it, that he called his son Fletcher that he might, early on a frosty winter morning, help his father feed nubbings of corn to his blooded stock. Fletcher, however, stood shivering in one corner of the barn, as the distinguished statesman fed the cattle. The father, observing Fletcher with chattering teeth and with his hands in his pockets, said; "My son, I fear you do not enjoy these cattle;" and Fletcher replying, "I think, father, I do n t," the father at once said; "You ough; to enjoy them, for they are better and m; companionable company than I ge, in Washington." Washington."

Now Rufus Choate was very unlike all this. While Webster loved the early oompanionable company than 1 ge. in Washington."

Now Rufus Choate was very unlike all this. While Webster loved the early morning, looking after his cattle and horses and pigs. Choate all this while would be reading his favorite Greek authors. We heard the late Prof. E. D. Sanborn, of Dartmouth college, at one time relate how Choate, being a guest of Webster, at his home in Marshfield, he (Webster) rapped early one morning at Choate's door and asked him if he was up, when the reply came, "Yes." "What are you doing," asked Webster. "Reading Homer." was the answer. When Webster said, "O, what a fool you are. Choate, to be reading that antedated Greek author when you might better be in the company of my pigs and hogs and cattle." "Drop your Homer, Rufus," he added, "and come to the barn with me." Now, Mr. Enterprise, don't think this an unpardonable digression, for it is the most natural of all things that we should tell you something of the distinguished passengers that Mr. Gilman took over his stage line years ago. After the veteran Samuel Gilman laid down the relns, then his son, Charles, took the ribbons in his own hands, and then followed Charles Gilman, Jr., who at present drives from North Sandwich to West Ossipee, while his son Charles drives from Centre Sandwich to Meredith, making in all the four generations on the public highway as stage drivers. It is with Charles Gilman, Jr., that we have especially to do in this letter, for it was only the other morning that we were one of his passengers, Mr. Gilman, as was his grandfather before him, is a genial man, and what is better than all else, he talks to the point. The morning of our ride with him was one of drenching rain, but this din to in anyway disturb his good nature and equanimity. Our ride to West Ossipee covered a distance of fifteen miles, so during our two hours behind horses fleet of foot, we discussed many a subject. Mr. Gilman carries the United States mail, so that we made two stops on the way to leave and take aboard additional mail. The fir of all this region. How nobly Whittier saw the best there was in everything. "And step by step, since time began. I see the steady gain of man."

So he sang.

Whatever else fails in this world of many disappointments, the going and coming of the mail seldom or never falls. It is bound to be delivered on time, independent of the weather. So important a work is the conveying of the mail that were the mail carrier suspected of whatever crime, of murder even, he could not be arrested until he had delivered his mail. Well, as we made our way we fell into conversation with our goodnatured and interesting driver on many a subject, among which was that more serious one of "what after death." We found Mr. Gilman, our guide, a little skeptical about "the hereafter." and to our query, "Where do you suppose we shall go when we die?" he replied. "I suppose nothing other than that we shall go into the ground," and then he added. "If someone could only return from the other side, if there be any other side, it would help us a wonderful bit." And so our dalk ended of the "great unknown." Just where such talk always must end, namely, in the unknown.

How we all of us become allied to our individual work in life! The minister of long standing would be lost without his pulpit, and the lawyer without his briefs, and so on through the varied professions and occupations. So naturally enough our driver said to us that he would feel ill at ease without his stage route.

That man is a success in life who can do one thing and do it well. It doesn't matter what that one thing may be, provided that it is legitimate work. Horace Mann says: "There is nothing derogatory in any employment that ministers to the well being of the race. It is the spirit that is carried into an employment that elevates or degrades it. The ploughman who turns the clod may be a Cincinnatus or a Washington or he may be brother to the clod he turns. It is every way creditable to handle the yard stick and measure tape—the only discredit being in having a soul as short

One of the "clues" followed by the detectives in the Blondin case was found in the fact that a man was heard to say frequently in his sleep, "I am caught." If all the people who go to sleep with that fear in their minds were relatives of Blondin, he would be a member of a large family.

L. A. Austin. P. O., East Lexington. W. L. Burrill, P. O., North Lexington.

Some three weeks ago a domestic employed at the Winning farm, in Woburn, was taken sick, and a Lexington physician was visited for treatment. The doctor took a culture from the woman's throat, sent it to the state board of health, who reported a case of diphtheria. The doctor, thinking the farm, which is a few feet over the Woburn line, was in Lexington, ordered the children away from the place, and sent word to the Lexington board of health to fumigate it. When the process of fumigation was over it was learned that the house was in Woburn and the bill for the expense was sent to that city.

As the Lexington physicians and members of the board of health have other duties to attend to than look up the boundary lines of the town, it was not surprising they made the mistake of going a few feet over the line, but the Wo burn News in its last week's editorial columns would make it appear that the Lexington parties had committed a grievous offence in acting as they did The article runs over nearly half a column, and has the ear marks of an inspir-tion by the Woburn board of health, who seem to be terribly broken up because they lost a fee out of it. The Woburn people appear to feel the loss keenly and will not be comforted. In behalf of the Lexington officials we beg a thousand pardons for the intrusion on Woburn soil, although since Woburn people send to Lexington for first class medical skill, it might be a good plan to take the services of the board of health, also, so as to have the whole business done in a reliable manner.

The farm was a part of the large grant of land from the court of the province to Edward Oakes, and was sold by him in 1661 to George Farley and others. Farley sold the farm to Timothy Brooks, who resided on the place during the troubles attending King Philip's war, and his family were protected in garrison No. 10, a short distance from his home. Brooks sold the farm to eGorge Grimes, who sold

In 1897 the rengin ug part of the original farm, containing ever 90 acres of land, was solid to Nathaniel, a retired in chant of Roston, who took possession, and the title passed from the Page family, who had owned and occupied the old house and farm 210 years. In the town of Bedford.

The militia of Massachusetts were organized into three county troops in 1643, and Middlesex county had one of these troops. This banner was carried by the Middlesex troop, and is undoubtedly the oldest banner in the country.

Nathaniel Page served in what is called Queen Anne's war. Ebenezer Page and others of the family were officers and privates in the French and Indian wars. Foer of the Page family fought at Concord, including Cornet Nathaniel Page. Christopher was sergeant of the minute and Tamothy was killed on White Allas, N. Y., Oct. 28, 1776. Ebenezer, William, Thomas and David served at different times during the revolution. Seven of this family were in the company of militin that marched from Bedford to Boston the war of 1812.

Cyrus Page volunteered as captain of the militin company in the civil war for three years, or the war, and he was then to verse of age, Grosvenor A. Page served three months.

the farm in 1087 to Nathaniel Page, 8r.

Nathaniel Page, 8r., came from England in 1684, and wast of Roxbury in 1686, and was probably the brother of Nicholas Page of Boston, who came from Plymouth, Eng. Gov. Joseph Pudley, appointed Nathaniel Page sheriff of the county of Suffolk. His wife's name was Joanna. He died April 12, 1622.

In his will be mentions "farm, buildings and land in Billerice, 425"; "a servant man, 415"; "farm, 200 acres at Dedham, 430"; "farm at Squabouge and Worcester, 410"

The farm, buildings and land mentioned in this will as of Billerica are located in the southeastern part of Bedford, in that part of Billerica, which was joined to the eastern part of Concord, to form the town of Bedford in 1729.

The old house was removed from its original site in 1880, and located about 300 feet west, and a new house was erected on the old site in 1880. This was destroyed by fire the same year. In 1891 the present large mansion was erected on the site of the house that was burned.

Two magnificent elm trees that stood near the western end of the old house was crected, and these trees are now from 250 to 300 years old. The largest tree, situated southwest from the new house, is 5 feet 6 inches in diameter. The other tree, on the northwest side of the new house, is 4 feet 6 inches in diameter. Isoth are noble specimens of the American elm.

The foundation members of the church, and Christopher Page. A record of the pews in the meeting hase Oct. 18, 1734, shows "Nathaniel Page's pew is on the front of the cast end of the great door in the receiting house." In 1777 William Page was town treasurer, and in 1780 Christopher Page was selectman.

Besides the town and church records, many silent records are found of this prominent and patriotic family on the old slate stones in the first burying ground at Bodford Centre, placed there by those whose record they give, and who knew their life's work. Cornet Nathaniel Page died April 6, 1779, aged 76 years; Cornet John Page died Feb. 18, 1782, aged 78 years.

In March, 1775, the town of Bedford voted "to pay 25 minute men 1 shilling per week until the first of May next." Joenathan Wilson, captain; Moses Abbot, Beutenant; Cornet Nathaniel Page, standard-bearer.

The standard was carried by Nathaniel Page in this company from Bedford to Concord. April 19, 1775, and near this banner Capt. Jonathan Wilson was killed the same day. This banner had probably been in the keeping of the Page family from early colonial times and after the fight at Concord it was returned to the old house, and was carried in the ranks of the Bedford delegates at the celebration at Concord. April 19, 1875. Oct. 19, 1885, the banner was presented by Capt. Cyrus Page erally for the estate, now named "Stone Acres."

Stepping directly from the highly cultivated and beautiful laying out of the front portion of the farm, one enters the northern half, where oak, walnut and pine groves stand, surrounded with broad meadows, with fields of berry bushes, laurel, bayberry and wild ferns, a country as wild and picturesque as is found through northern New Hampshire, and here small game, such as woodchucks, quall, mink and rabblis are in abundance, as they were when King Philip's allies roamed through these same woods. The running brook, dammed for preserving trout, and "Pickwick springs," with their cold, crystal water bubbling up through the white sand, are the natural fountains of this wild and beautiful spot.

LESSON VIII, THIRD QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, AUG. 25.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. xxii, 1-14, Memory Verses, 6-8-Golden Text, Heb. xi, 17-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.] 1. "And it came to pass after these things that God did tempt Abraham." In our last lesson we looked just a little at chapter xix concerning the destruction of Sodom and rescue of Lot. In chapter xx Abraham went to sojourn at Gerar and fell into the same sin which troubled him in Egypt and was rebuked by Abimelech. His answer in verse 11 was testimony against himself, for he should not willingly have gone where the fear of God was not. In chapter xxi we have the birth of Isaac and the casting out of Ishmael and find Abraham dwelling at Beersheba and worshiping the Lord under a new name, the everlasting God. Note in verse 6 Sarah's testimony, "God hath made me to laugh," and in verses 17 and 18 God's promise to Hagar, with His "Fear not," which is, I think, the second in the book. "God did tempt: Abraham" signifies that God tried him: (Heb. xi, 17), for "the Lord trieth therighteous" (Ps. xi, 5), but He will not try any one above that he is able (I Cor. x, 13), and patience under trial will bring the crown of life (Jas. i. 12; Rev. ii, 10).

2, 3. "Offer him for a burnt offering." This from God concerning his only son, his well beloved, for whom he had waited 25 years at least. Compare xii, 4, and Yet see his ready obedience, for he believed that God would raise him up even from the dead, from whence also he received him in a figure. Was ever a mortal man so tried, or did ever man come so near to God in his experience? In Israel all God's promises to Abraham centered, and if they were not fulfilled in Isaac the word of God would fail (chapter xxi, 12), a thing which could not possibly occur. Mount Moriah, where Abraham was to offer up Isaac, was the same as that whereon the temple was builded by Solomon (II Chron. iii, 1), for both tabernacle and temple stood, in a figure, upon atonement, the silver sockets of the tabernacle being made from the ransom money of the people.
4, 5. "On the third day." It is to be as resurrection story, and the third day isthe resurrection day whether of Jonah or Christ, whether in Gen. i or John ii, 1, or Hos. vi. 2. When He said, "Surely I come quickly," He may have thought of the 2,000 years of this present age astwo days and referred to His coming. again on the morning of the third day. Abraham's words to his young men, "I and the lad will go yonder and worshipand come again to you," show his strong faith that in some way Isaac would be given back to him.

6, 7. "Where is the lamb for a burnt offering?" Did a sword pierce Abraham's heart as his only son asked him this ques-tion? See Isaac bearing the wood and think of the Son of God bearing the cross on which He was to suffer. See Abraham carrying the fire and the knife and remember that it is written, "It pleased? the Lord to bruise Him." All that Christ suffered from His enemies must have been as nothing when compared with Hisagony as He cried, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" (Math. xxvii, 46.) No tongue can tell, no words can describe, what it cost the Father to-give Him up to die for our sins or what

He suffered as our substitute,

8. "My son, God will provide Himself a lamb for a burnt offering. So they went both of them together." "Behold the Lamb of God!" said John the Baptist as he pointed Him out. The redeemed as they fall before the Lamb sing, "Thou are worthy for Thou west slainered between the said of the said said. worthy, for Thou wast slain and hast re-Ornamental Gardener.

deemed us to God by Thy bleed," and a hundred millions of angels cry, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain" (John i, 29; Rev. v, 8, 9, 11, 12). He had been fore-ordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in due time. 9, 10. How the father's heart must have been torn as he built the altar and laid the wood upon it! But what were his feelings as he bound Isaac and laid him on the altar upon the wood and took the knife in his hand to slay his son? Who can tell but God? For no one had ever just the same fellowship with God-How deep the meaning of the words "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son," or these, "The Son of God loved me and gave Himself for me," or "His own self bare our sins in His own body," "Bruised for our iniquities!"

11, 12. "Now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, from Me." spake the angel of the Lord, the Son of God, the Lamb of God Himself, as He staid the uplifted arm of Abraham. He had tried His servant and had found him leaning not upon Isaac, the gift of God, but upon God Himself. We are apt to allow the good gifts of God to come between Him and us and lean upon them rather than upon Him, so that for our good He oft removes His gifts.

13. "Abraham went and took the ram and offered him up for a burnt offering in the stead of his son." As truly was Christ, the Lamb of God, offered in our stead, as our substitute, bearing our sins. There is no salvation by trying to live as. He lived, for we cannot live His life except as He shall live it in us, and He is not in us until we receive Him as the One who died in our stead. The redemp-tion which God has provided begins in our experience with the forgiveness of sins, and he whose sins are not forgiven has not Christ in him.

14. "And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh." The margin says that the name signifies "the Lord will see or provide." Since He has given for us His dearest and best, how can we think for a moment that He will withhold aught from us that will be for our good? (Ps. lxxxiv, 11.) Let us adopt these words, if we have not already done so, as one of the mottoes of our daily life and glorify God by unbounded and unwaverng faith in Him, withholding nothing from Him, but abandoning ourselves ut-terly to Him for His good pleasure, that He may glorify Himself in us. This rhapter leaves Abraham dwelling at Beersheba (verse 19); in the next Sarah dies at the age of 127 and is buried in dies at the age of 127 and is buried in Hebron. In chapter xxiv the servant of Abraham, Ellezer, obtains Rebekah from Laban as a wife for Isaac. In chapter xxv Abraham dies at the age of 175 and is buried by Isaac and Ishmael beside Sarah at Hebron. The death of Ishmael is also recorded at the age of 137. Isaac is seen dwelling by the well Lahai-rol, the well of Him that liveth and seeth me (Gen. xxi, 14, margin). There let usardwell while we sojourn in these bodies

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

Captive Elephants.

Elephants in captivity have been known to weep incessantly. Captivity is borne by elephants with little grace. All are rewess most of the time, and some never cease to shed tears. When an elephant has been unsuccessful in an attempt to escape, it seems that his spirit is forever after downcast. Keepers of elephants under these circumstances have found that the poor brutes cry most of the time.

Elephants have always exhibited very human traits, but this one of crying brings them closer to the human family than any other attribute. An elephant weeps practically for the same cause which would make a man weep. On setting the animal free, which has been done for experiment, tear shedding immediately ceases, and the animal returns to its cheerfulness of disposition. On returning to captivity it again begins to weep.

A Small Pony.

Think of a Shetland pony so small that a little girl can pick it up and carry it about as she would a pet dog. And yet out in Guthrie Center, Ia., there is such a wee bit of a horse, and the picture represents the little maiden as she holds it in her arms. The little girl is Lulu Lemon, and the pony is owned by her father. The pony weighed only 17 pounds at the time the picture was taken and was 14 days old. Miss Lemon is 11 years old. It is needless to say that she is very fond of her little pet.—Chicago Record.

The Little Tumbler.

Make a figure of a man of any very light substance—the pith of the elder tree, for instance, which is soft and can be easily cut into any form. Then provide a hemispherical base of some heavy material, such as the half of a large leaden bullet, and take away all inequalities which may be on the convex part (look in your dictionaries for these hard words). Fasten the figure to the flat surface of the half bullet, kinds of trees have grown together, and in whatever position it is placed when left to itself it will immediately rise upright.

"Vaccination Day." Edith of Boston came home from kindergarten in a state of excitement. "Oh, mamma," she exclaimed, "we don't have to go to school tomorrow!" "Why not?" asked mamma, smiling.

"Because teacher says it's Vaccina tion day, when Bridget left Boston." Mamma thought a moment and then remembered that the next day was the anniversary of Evacuation day, when the British left Boston.

Camphored His Money. For what seemed to Ned a long time

he had been saving up pennies, dimes and nickels in his toy bank. At last the day came when it was opened, and there among the little heap of coins the mother found a piece of camphor.

"Why, Ned," she asked, "what made you put this in your bank?" "Because," replied Ned, with earnest ness, "I didn't want the moth and rust to get at my money!"

Combs of Gold and Jewels. The most popular coiffure exhibits the hair tucked in everywhere and held with combs - combs of gold and tortoise shell and clusters of jewels, the last being set flat into the tortoise shell. Purses are jeweled, too, being mostly of the bag shape in gold chain work, and all the tops of these glitter with blue or green stones.

ODD LOOKING TREES.

TWISTED AND DISTORTED BY GALES FROM THE OCEAN.

A Grove on the Jersey Coast Which Presents a Curious Scene of Fantastic Confusion - Trees Tortured Into the Form of Letters.

In Japan large salaries are paid to skilled gardeners who can twist and torture trees from their normal forms of growth into the likeness of animals, boats, houses and other designs. Of late years the custom has been imported to this country and with it the oriental tree twisters. Not the most skillful of them, however, can beat acture's distorters of vegetation, the persistent are one and the same person. And he is winds, and the Japanese experts could doing better work than ever, now. Three winds, and the Japanese experts could learn lessons in the surprising and fantastic form of a grove of trees on the Jersey coast.

The place is aptly called Wildwood. It forms a part of an island cut off from the mainland by a narrow arm of the ocean. For centuries the gales have wrought their fierce will upon the vegetation. Although the soil seems to be largely composed of white sand, it is fertile; otherwise there would not be on the island, in the face of the almost constant winds, the luxuriant growth both of trees and lower forms of vegetable life with which it is covered.

Wild grapes are abundant, and vines are seen which are fully 8 to 12 inches thick and have in some cases so completely covered the trees that the arboreal foliage can scarcely be seen. Extending along the ground and up the trunks into the branches some of the vines look like huge snakes, and many an unsuspecting visitor has had a shock by coming into contact with their swaying sinuosities in the shady nooks of the place.

The trees themselves have assumed some very odd forms. For instance, there are two which are very similar to the letter "W" and have been called 'W" trees by the natives.

In the middle of this curious grove is a lagoon or pond, on the banks of which is one of the oddest formations of the grove. This is a pine tree, which is still growing, in spite of disadvantages. The trunk has been twisted around so as to form the figure 8 from one point of view and the letter O looking at it from another point, while one of the branches or arms at the left forms the head of a snake, including the curve in the neck. The front view of the snake is startlingly realistic, the head being of the true flat topped, venomous type and the posture characteristically viperine. The tree is evidently very old, as indicated by the trunk, and will probably be dead in a few years, as its foliage is scant and confined to a few small, irregular boughs. The mystery is why it did not die before, distorted as it is.

In the center of Wildwood is a pavilion where refreshments are served to visitors. The principal support of this pavilion is formed by a tree which passes through the center and out of the roof. Its branches form an excellent protection from the sun in summer, while the roof girders are fastened into it in place of the usual posts.

All these freak trees are located about a mile from the highway on the banks of what is known as Grassy sound. They form a grove about a mile long and a half mile in width. In the entire lot scarcely one can be found which grows like an ordinary tree. The various species include holly, birch, pine, cherry, ash and cedar. Some of the cedars still giving out leaves have not a particle of bark upon their trunks from the ground to the first branches. The winter gales have stripped the cov-

Experts who have examined them say that many of the trees are undoubtedly several centuries old. The action of the wind upon the branches has twisted them into every conceivable fashion, so that it is hard to tell where one branch begins and another ends. In several parts of the grove different such as fir and holly and cherry and ash. The growth is generally formed by a limb from one being bent against the other, as shown in the case of the N tree remaining in that place while it gradually made a cleft for itself. It is quite common for two trees of the same variety to grow together, but the joining of the different varieties, as shown here, is a problem which the experts have not yet been able to solve, especially where some of the limbs grow from one tree directly into the trunk of another and have not been forced against the outside. A number of examples of this form of growth are also to be seen.

The owner of the grove has cut out some of the most striking distortions of the trees which have died. One represents a harp without strings, while another is in the form of a triangle, and another seems to be modeled from a water pitcher.-Washington Star.

Don't Be Selfish.

It is a great satisfaction at the close of life to be able to look back on the years that are past and to feel that you have lived not for yourself alone, but that you have been useful to others. You may be assured also that the same feeling is a source of comfort and happiness at any period of life. Nothing in this world is so good as usefulness. It binds your fellow creatures to you and you to them, it tends to the improvement of your own character, and It gives you a real importance in society much beyond what any artificial station can bestow.-Selected.

SUMMER DRAPERIES.

ne Suggestions For Artistic Win dow Sash Curtains.

The draperies in the accompanying illustrations are all intended to be made up in muslin or silk and will form a very pleasant contrast to the rather trite and wornout patterns now in use. Beyond a piece of simple muslin or muslin plaited many people seem to be without ideas on this important subject, and important it is, for the first impression of any house is derived from a glance at the windows. A very pretty idea is given in the upper figure. The suggestion is really for a silk blind. A sort of border is cut out round the silk and fine lace sewed in. This helps to give light and at the same time is extremely pretty. The blind might be hung on a frame as is shown or might GOOD DINNER be bound with something at the top and be hung on a rod. Variations of WATCHES and consist in perhaps a little undulation at the bottom of the blind for a fringe. By daytime one gets the warm light through the silk and by night the pretty lace is seen.

In the second figure more elaboration is apparent, and here a special frame is certainly necessary. The silk is gathered together in a sort of bunch in the middle of the blind, and the light streaming through will make this look very pretty.

In the third figure muslin might be used, and it would perhaps not be too daring an innovation to suggest that a double sided cretonne should be inserted in the strip shown. Of course, the cretonne would want very careful choosing in conjunction with the mustablespoonfuls of boiling water and let stand in a warm place until thoroughly dissolved, then strain into the rice. Set into a pan of ice and water and stir until it begins to set, then flavor with one tablespoonful of vanilla extract and fold in one cup of double cream beaten solid. Put the mixture into a quart mold, filling the corners and packing solidly, and press the cover on tightly over paper. Let stand packed in equal parts of ice and salt about two hours. The mixtures should not be frozen very hard. Serve with orange or lemon jelly cut in small cubes. Arrange the jelly as a wreath about the glace. Raspberry or strawberry preserves may be used instead of the jelly.

For the lemon jelly let one box of gelatin soak in three-fourths a cup of cold water, dissolve in a pint of boiling water in which a two inch piece of cinnamon bark has been steeping on the back of the range half an hour or more, add one cup of sugar and when cold three-fourths a cup of lemon juice. Strain through a cheesecloth into a shallow dish. The jelly should be about half an inch thick. When thoroughly cold, spread a paper over the meat board, immerse the vessel containing the jelly in warm water and invert on the paper. Dip a sharp knife into warm water and cut the jelly into equal squares.—Boston Cooking School Magazine.

The Throne of Lilies,

The throne of France is called "the throne of lilies" because of the old national emblem-the fleur-de-lis, a species of lily. The story of the adoption of the fleur-de-lis is partly historical and partly legendary.

According to history, Clovis, king of the Franks, married the Princess Clotilde of Burgundy in A. D. 493. The young queen, who was a Christian, earnestly desired the conversion of her husband, who, like most of the Frankish nation, was a heathen. Her arguments, however, had but little effect upon him. In 496 the Franks and the Allemanni (Germans) were at war, and at the battle of Talbiac, near Cologne, Clovis was so hard pressed by his enemies that in desperation he called upon the God of the Christians for help, vowing that should he obtain victory he would himself become a Christian. The Allemanni were routed, and on were baptized. The confinuation of the story, which is legendary, is that on the eve of his baptism an angel from heaven presented King Clovis with a blue banner embroidered with golden fleur-de-lis, which he was to adopt as the banner of France. However this may have been, the fact remains that from the time of Clovis to the French revolution the kings of France bore as their arms first an indefinite number and latterly three golden lilies on an azure field.

Finest Sevres In the World. At Buckingham palace there is an apartment called the Bow library, which contains one of the finest collections of Sevres in the world. There also is an immense Chinese plaque or trophy taken as loot from a palace in Peking during one of the Chinese wars early in Victoria's reign. It is said that a great Chinese noble who was very anxious to see Buckingham palace once recognized and identified it with some show of displeasure. Two immense rectangular oriental vases over four feet high stand on the floor of one of the rooms and have the comparatively narrow medallioned necks and lids with which cheap modern Kaga specimens have made us all familiar. They are of rich dark blue, pencil gilt, and the small medallions and large panels are all white and most gracefully painted with flowers, and in one central panel with the bit of wall indicated in the common willow pattern. A couple of large vases of the tear bottle shape are also of this rich blue, trellised with gold and with white panels on the round part painted with flowers. There are also some fine examples of green crackled celadon, the old eastern kind, in which a pale sea green color was mixed with the paste before firing and very different from any colorings put on the surface after-

Potsonous Silk Stockings. In producing certain delicate colors in silk chloride of tin is used as a mordaunt, and it is said that unless great care is taken a large proportion of it remains in the completed fabric. In the case of stockings or any garment next the skin the perspiration may dissolve the tin, and it is then absorbed by the skin. A case is reported from Vienna of a woman who suffered from attacks of paralysis in the lower extremities, with numbness, a sense of coldness and a peculiar jerkiness of the legs in walking. She noticed that whenever these symptoms were the worst her feet were colored yellow, and it was found that this staining was caused by light yellow silk stockings which she wore. They were analyzed and considerable quantities of tin

The obvious moral of this says The Hospital, is that ladies should not wear pretty silks next their skin in hot weather unless they can be sure they are not mordaunted with tin salts. Colors which are "fast" in relation to ordinary washing are frequently readily soluble in perspiration.

Telegraphy and Invention.

The Abbe Barthelemy seems to have had a prevision of the practical use to be made of electricity in sending messages. Writing to Mme, du Deffand in 1772, he observes:

"It is said that with two timenieces. the hands of which are magnetic, it is enough to move one of these hands to make the other take the same direction, so that by causing one to strike 12 the other will strike the same hour. Let us suppose that artificial magnets were improved to the point that their virtue could communicate itself from here to Paris. You have one of these timepieces, we another of them. Instead of hours we find the letters of the alphabet on the dial. Every day at a certain hour we turn the hand, and M. Wiard, Mme. du Deffand's secretary, puts together the letters and reads. This idea pleases me immensely. It would soon be corrupted by applying it to spying in armies and in politics, but it would be very agreeable in commerce and in friendship."

The Crows' Judicial System.

That feature of crow life that we might call the judiciary system has interested ornithologists more than anything else. There seems to be no doubt that crows have a judicial system for the trial and punishment of culprits. According to the accounts of reputable observers, the crow courts are conducted something after this fashion: A solemn conclave of old crokers is held on a tree. A crestfallen prisoner is among them. Three or four old fellows, probably crow lawyers, will jabber away for awhile, and then there will be an apparent consultation of the whole flock sitting as a jury. If the verdict be against the prisoner, he is sentenced to death and turned over to the executioners, who peck the life out of him.-Exchange.

A Beltaine Story.

BY ALICE FURLONG. -----

In the pass of Windy Gap, among the mountains of Slieve Margy, it was April, and the brook, that came with the winds from higher lands and leapwent into the valley by banks of primroses and carried away in its water dropped catkins from the overhanging willows and thin brown sheaths that had been hiding young buds from the sun and rain.

It was on the very last day of the month that Dan Heffernan of Windy Gap came to his father where he was plowing in the steep field and walked by his side on the unbroken sod and told him that he was going to seek a wife. The father began to count the comfortable young women in the par-

"There's Kate O'Connor, a likely girl, or Grace Rohan, that tras a roll o' guineas tied up in a stockin," he said. He deove the bright plowshare into the earth and urged on the meek cattle up the slope. The sun was dipping behind Slieve Ruadh, evening birds began to pipe and lilt from the green copses, and a host of crows were in the track of the plow, watching for worms and garrulous among themselves. "Or mebbe you'd be havin an eye on the widow woman-a fine armful," said the fa-

The cheek of the young man reddened. He had no fancy for Mollie Doheny, the widow woman. A year makes a great difference in the feelings of a young man.

"I went courtin her last summer," said Dan to his father, "but it was before the uncle in Tipperary town left me that bit o' money, an she said 'No' to me."

The round gold sun rolled out of The young man looked up as the last gleam went, and he saw in heaven little clouds hovering. He thought that him repent of it, granny asthore." they were like young rosy angels and that the countenance of every angel the hill.

"Mollie was a sensible woman, father," said Dan. "An that's no bad compliment to put upon her, but I'm goin elsewhere for a wife."

It was then that the old man follow-said with a shout and gave the ropes cide"such a pull that the plow horses came to a stand, while the crows flew away in affright at the noise and made it tenfold greater with their cawing and the flapping of their black wings. "Sure, Noreen has no more nor one sickly cow to get for her portion," grumbled the father. And then he gave a snort of derision and shook the ropes on the backs of the cattle until they went listening. again on their patient way over the brown furrow that was sweet and fresh of smell in the April evening. The father tramped along moody and silent, determined to set his face more nor time to strike upon the dewagainst this poor marriage that his boy an sweep that same dew into your was considering. Noreen O'Driscoll in- apron wid your hand, sayin, 'All's deed! Fitter far for Dan to look out mine; all's mine! That neighbor may for a comfortable woman with a few sleek cows to match his own.

The son left his father's side and went from the field by the gate in the low stone wall that was half hidden in deep, soft mosses and plumy fern. He strode up the mountain, over the grav grass and the golden beaded furze that was filling the darkening air with the lonely was the evening star in that misty blue heaven from which the rosy angels had flown after the sun. There cabin they had smiled upon in love, and white riband and at its end, which was the door of Noreen's home.

The cabin was well nigh dark, what with the haze of the turf smoke and the hour that was in it, but Dan saw the mother of Noreen knitting beside the hearth, and who should happen to was anybody up but herself, nor ever be her companion but Mollie Doheny, the widow woman. The young man was no whit sorry to see her there. His black eyes flashed as he bade her the time of evening and sat himself on the creepie stool by Mrs. O'Driscoll.

"What good luck druv you this way tonight, Dan agra?" asked the mother of Noreen. "An did you catch e'er a glimpse o' me little girl as you come up the hill?"

"Tis lookin for Noreen I come here, ma'am," said Dan, and he fixed his eyes upon the mother in such a manner that she partly guessed what he was after. As for the young widow, she grew as red in the face as a poppy. With his five sleek cows to graze her two little fields, Dan Heffernan had been a husband to Mollie's fancy. "It's unlucky to take a wife in the month o' May," she said viciously. "I'll wait till May's over," answered

Dan Heffernan. "An mebbe you will put in an appearance at our weddin, Mollie."

"Who's talkin of a weddin?" cried a voice from the door, and in walked little Noreen herself, her eyes like violets all shining with the evening dew.

"'Tis meself is talkin of it, Noreen," said young Dan Heffernan, and, standing up, he put his two hands on her shoulders and looked down into her face, "an it's you that has the sayin of yea or pay to me in the matther.'

"You've a rag on every bush, Dan Heffernan!" cried the widow, rising and flouncing out of the place.

But no one was paying any attention to her, for Noreen had run away to hide her face on her mother's bosom. and the young man was trying to coax her out of her shyness that would not let her say yea, though she was very fain to speak the word.

It fell out that as Mollie Doheny was on the road home she met with the wise woman from Drumderg. The wise woman was stooped and withered. Her face had a thousand wrinkles on it, like the skin of an old brown apple, and her eyes were nearly shut up in her head. She muttered with herself as ed, singing, down through the gap, she walked and said "S-sh, s-sh," to the right side and the left, as if she were bidding ghostly unseen things to leave her way. With one hand she leaned upon a stick, and with the other she held an apronful of fresh gathered herbs that exhaled dim and moist odors from their crushed and broken stems.

"It's late you're wandherin, ma'am," said Mollie, standing somewhat aside to let the crone pass. The young widow was half afraid, for the hour was solemn with falling darkness and the first stars.

" 'Tis the night for wandherin, acushla." muttered the old woman, letting her face fall lower toward the ground, "an not lonesome are me wandherin's." "God between us an all harm!" said the widow, shivering.

The wise woman lifted her eyebrows and peered out at Mollie Doheny and began to smile darkly.

"What harm is in it to talk with the shee, the fine an fair mannered people "They're good friends to them that comes to them. Oh, a very gentle night is this. Mollie, agra! Many a sthrange thing is done between the dark an the dawn. Many a flower an herb pulled in this dew has powers in it to make knowledge; but, sure, you're a handsome young woman." She dropped her dark, gleaming eyes and moved forward on her way.

"Wait a minute, ma'am; just a minute!" cried Mollie of a sudden. She had forgotten her fright and remembered the insult put upon her by that sight over the edge of the mountain. young Dan Heffernan. "I've a grudge agen a neighbor that did me a bad turn. life the charm. Dishonest butther has a Tell us one little charm that 'id make

The old woman turned herself back. A kind of dusky fire was burning in was bent in love upon a homely cabin her eyes. She looked around her - to standing far and lonely on the brow of bush and brake and rugged bowlder of poor creature was fain to run away as stone—as if she were reading the faces of them that spoke by her mouth.

"You're a poor crathure!" she said then. "But, since you axed me, you'll get the charm. Go up to the neighbor's fields in the mornin-before the sun has go look for butther on their churnin's, Doheny. But the old hag shrugged herself and went away into the dark of the enchanted night.

Early the next morning came Noreen O'Driscoll to milk her little cow under scent of honey. Pure and high and the hedge of thorn outside Heffernan's meadow, that being the little cow's favorite place of pasture. The sun was rising over Drumderg, and on southern was a beaten path up the hill to that banks the 'aisies opened their golden eyes. In the hollows and stretches of soon Dan Heffernan was treading the shade the dew lay like the breath of the May morning made visible.

"What under heaven brings Mollie Doheny up here at this hour?" wondered Noreen to herself, seeing the widow woman walking through the wet meadow. Mollie never imagined that there saw a sight of Noreen O'Driscoll, for the hedge of thorns was thick, and it was through a wee break in the boughs that the widow woman's rival had caught a glimpse of her shawl and her white apron.

The widow went over the daisies where the dew was melting fast and came upon the silvered bollows. She stooped and swept the dews into her apron.

"All's mine, all's mine," she said as she did this.

"Bedad, it's not," whispered Noreen just for fun and with no meaning in what she said. "Half it's mine." The little cow munched the grass, waiting to be milked, and the rising sun grew smaller as he went up the sky.

The widow woman went on the next stretch of shadow and swept the dew into her apron. "All's mine, all's mine," said she again. This time she was very close to Noreen O'Driscoll.

"Bedad, it's not," said Noreen, out loud. "Half it's mine."

"Saints an angels?" cried the widow woman, overhearing. "It's the fairles is afther me!" And she took to running and never stopped until she was out of the meadow on the far side. Noreen O'Driscoll thought that Mollie had lost her five wits to get on with such work. But there was no time for thinking. The cow had to be milked and the hens fed before breakfast. So Noreen milked the cow, and maybe she was not astonished to find the pail full up to the brim in a few minutes.

'Tis the new grass is agreein with the crathure, God bless her!" said Noreen's mother when she saw the can full of rich milk. Then Noreen told her the goings on of the young widow.

"Well, well," said the mother, "there's no mindin what's done of a May mornin. Mebbe the crathure was maneuverin for another husband." And so the matter passed, and no more was said about it.

From May day out the yield of the little sickly cow was surprising, and very soon Noreen began to take the butter around to the farmers' houses to sell. By the end of the month she had sold sufficient to pay the price of a strong calf. "They're gettin along," said the father of Dan Heffernan. He was up the fields one day looking for some sign of his crop of wheat, and he put an inquisitive eye upon the lone cabin in the cleft of the hill. "Mebbe I might as well withdraw me objections." When he went down to the house, he told his son that he had his consent to marry with Noreen O'Driscoll.

"It's a new calf, ready reared, that I see above wid them," he said. "Good an industhrious people they must be to have that same. Likely the colleen'll look to your cows better nor they're looked to now."

"She'd want to," said young Dan, "for 'tis scarcely a tent of milk they're giving this while back."

And small blame it was to the beasts, seeing that their milk had been stolen o' the raths?" she said, mumbling. by the fairies and divided between Mollie Doheny and Noreen O'Driscoll. After a bit Dan Heffernan and Noreen were married, and no sooner was the bride brought home but Dan's cows began to improve, while the little one Noreen had for her portion went back you thremble. I could tell you how to in her milk. But between them all win a sweetheart, an you wanted that there was full and plenty for the young people, and they were as happy as the day is long.

Meantime the widow woman repented herself of her witchcraft.

"Musha, what at all at all will I do?" she said in her own mind. "If I tell Father John, he'll send me to the bishop for meddlin wid the like. Faith, I'll g'up to the wise woman an get her to tang in the mouth." But the wise woman only said, "It's aisy to light a fire, but not so to put it out." And she scowled on Mollie Doheny with such an evil eye that the quick as her feet would carry her from the cabin of the wise woman. So all that was left for her to do was this: After every churning she sent a corpse to put into their bosom an over a big roll of butter to the Heffermake them love you to distraction while nans as a present, moryah, until the Doheny for meddling with

The devil is always on the lookout for funerals and follows them to seize the soul of the dead man, so in order to outwit the evil one the bearers The crone smiled in her own strange | take up the body and start with it on a manner and stood awhile as if she were | brisk trot, while the packs of firecrackers and pyrotechnics, emitting a dense smoke and vile smell, are set off just as > the procession starts. Having thus deceived the evil one as to the direction taken by the bearers, they run as fast as they can with the body, then suddenly turn a corner and stop while more fireworks are burned. The devil cannot turn a corner easily, and so, if really in pursuit, he shoots on by, and by means of a good deal of sudden turning and stopping and a lavish expenditure of fireworks the funeral procession generally gets to the grave in safety, while the evil one, confused by their movements and half suffocated by the fireworks, is still wandering about the city. The Chinaman who dies in the country is not in such good luck, for there is less chance to outwit the enemy, but by many detours it can very often be done.

Slippery Customers.

Fish are exceedingly difficult to hold when first taken from the water. This slipperiness is caused by a mucus that is exuded from the scales, and it is curious to note the uses of this slime.

One of its uses is to protect the fish from its enemies. Being difficult to grasp, it slips away and gets free. Animal foes are not its only enemies. In every kind of water, salt or fresh, pure or foul, there are plant fungi that will fasten themselves to fishes if there is any opportunity. If some portion of the fish's body is injured so that the slime does not cover it, the vegetable fungus clings to that part, then spreads over the body, with the result that the gills are covered and the poor fish is done for. The mucus also lessens the friction. thus facilitating progress through the water. It also serves as a buffer for the scales, preventing injury to a great extent. A Reason.

Anthony Munighan, of 22 Ratiroad treet, West Cambridge, had his left street. West Cambridge, had his left hand badly lacerated yesterday afternoon while at work at the Cambridge lee Co.'s house at the foot of Linwoo! street. He was engaged, with aboth/r workman, loading a wagon with la/ge cakes of ice, and the other man was standing upon a staging several feet higher than Munighan. Suddenly a cake of ice slipped from the other man's ice tongs and fell upon the tongs Munighan was using. In some way the congs but was using. In some way the cings but ited the sharp point into the man's flesh and tore a ragged gash almost the entire length of the hand. The blood spurted a stream, and quick action was taken. Andrew Dempsey, who was nearby, took Munighan in a team, and on the way to the police station met Officer Hooley, who jumped into the buggy and directed the men to the office of Dr. C. A. Kee-gan. The latter dressed the wound, and was obliged to take several stitches. The injured man was then removed to his

The city of Cambridge seems to be placed in an odd position in regard to contagious hospitals for while she objects to the erection of a contagious hospital in Somerville within 100 rods of the jects to the erection of a contagious hospital in Somerville within 100 rods of the city's boundary line (a statutory rule), it is intent on building one within 100 rods of Belmont, or, rather, intends to build there and expects that town to grant it permission to do so. Although it does not seem to be a very desirable institution to have so near the boundary, yet the citizens of Belmont will feel that they have an interest in it, if it was built with their permission, and doubtless a large number of the Belmont cases will be sent there if it is built. As it is now, Belmont and Waverley are dependent upon Waltham for a hospital and it is necessary to transport patients a long distance when ill, and contagious cases considerably farther, but if this hospital is built it will be used by Belmont, not as extensively as by Cambridge, but for what cases exist in the town, which is as far as one owned by the town would be used, and yet not have it within our limits. It is evident that the city of Cambridge is willing to make concessions and the matter should be considered very thoroughly before adverse action is taken, if such is contemplated.

GOOD CLOTHES.

Most Public Men Appreciate the Ef- Curious Ways of a Strange Class In feet They Produce.

Perhaps only a woman knows the pleasure afforded by the consciousness of being well dressed, but most public men are aware of the magnetic effect of a tailor made suit.

Fernando Wood, who represented the lower wards of New York in congress, always addressed his ragged, coatless, dirty constituents arrayed in a swallowtailed coat, white tie and kid gloves. The "unwashed" appreciated the compliment and cheered the louder for "Fernandy Wud."

Daniel Webster, knowing that the elo-quence even of Demosthenes was aided by the folds of his toga, always wore his best clothes when he appeared on the public platform or addressed the senate. Once, on being asked why he wore such an elaborate dress when making a speech, he reproachfully turned upon the questioner and asked if he should not present his best thoughts, his best manner, his best garb when he addressed his fellow men?

But, in truth, Webster's garb was simply that of the English Whigs in the days of Charles Fox-blue swallowtailed coat with gilt buttons, buff vest, brown

Charles Sumner once cited it as an answer to unfriendly critics who complained that he was too fastidious and dogmatic when addressing the senate on matters of mere routine.

"Mr. Sumner," says Mr. Brooks, "affected a picturesque style of dress, wearing colors brighter than those which predominated in the senatorial togas of the period. His favorite costume was a brown coat and light waistcoat, lavender colored or checkered trousers and shoes his seat in the senate chamber was studiously dignified. He once told me that he never allowed himself, even in the privacy of his own chamber, to fall into a position which he would not take in his chair in the senate. 'Habit is everything,' he said."-Century Magazine.

SOME SAYINGS.

"That happened in the reign of Queen Dick" is a circumlocution for "Never."

"To take her down a peg" is nothing but a sailor's direction as to the lowering of the ship's colors.

To "have the gift of gab" means the gift of the (use of the) mouth, "gab" being the Scotch word for mouth. "Spick and span" comes from the

"spikes" and "spanners"—the hooks and stretchers for stretching cloth new from the loom. "Put that into your pipe and smoke it" is an allusion to the pipes of peace or war that are solemnly smoked by some To "dun" a man for debt comes from the memory of Joe Dun, bailiff of Lincoln, who was so keen a collector that his name has become a proverb. To "get the sack" is a fate that some times overtook inmates of a certain sultan's harem, who were put into a sack and thrown into the Bosporus when he desired to be rid of them. Deadhead, as denoting one who has free entrance to places of amusement, comes from Pompeil, where the checks for free admission were small ivory death's heads. Specimens of these are in the museum at Naples. "By hook and by crook" is an allusion to an ancient manorial custom which permitted the neighboring poor to take all the wood that they could reach and pull down from the forest trees, using only their shepherds' crooks.

When Women Become Strong.

There are startling examples of the development of the capacity in women for doing men's work. When families that have been strong and prospered get started down hill and the men die off or go to seed or lose heart or health, it is not an uncommon thing to see the women develop under stress of circumstances a virile vigor that meets the storm and weathers

Very able women are developed by de fects in man, and, of course, when the wheel has once fallen to them and their wills have been trained to steering they will not readily give up a place that they have fairly won. Nor should they. The mischief, what there is of it, has been done; let the consequences abide. The chief mischief is that, though a woman may come out strong in tioing a man's work, the man whose work is done for him, if there is one, is apt to come out weak .- McClure's Magazine.

The White Pine.

According to Professor Spalding, the white pine tree seldom attains a height greater than 160 feet or a diameter of more than 40 inches. A tree of this variety once measured by the division of forestry of the department of agriculture was 170 feet tall and 48 inches thick. The tree was 400 years old. It was a little sapling 50 years before Columbus salled from Palos.

It is not an easy tree to propagate, so many of the seeds being unfertile. It does not, as a rule, produce flowers and cones until it is 15 or 20 years old. During the first decade of its life it will grow about one foot every 12 months, and it grows a little faster till maturity. A tree 20 years old ought to be about 25 feet high, and at 30 or 40 years of age it ought to measure about 60 feet.

SALT WORKERS OF CADIZ.

A considerable part of the province of Cadiz, in Spain, is low, marshy ground, unfit for cultivation. Nevertheless it is turned to good account by being utilized for the production of salt by evaporation. This is one of the most extensive industries and sources of revenue in the province. It gives employment to thousands of workmen and makes Cadiz an important seaport, as more than two-thirds of the 400,000 tons annually produced is exported to foreign lands.

The pans are dug out in the muddy soil. They vary in size, but are of a uniform depth of ten inches. All the salt producing land is intersected with innumershle small canals. From June to September is the season for salt production. During this period from three to four harvests are gathered.

The salt workers form a distinct class of workmen. One generation follows another. They are born and bred to it and form one huge family. No outsider need dream of getting work there.

It is a curious sight to see the men at work and the way they get about. The business requires considerable skill. The soil is muddy and is almost a quicksand. Any person unacquainted with the work setting foot on a salt pan would be drawn down and swallowed up in a very few minutes. The way the salt workers get about this dangerous ground, one leg at a time, barely resting the toes and knee on the mud, is an art in itself.

All the work is done in the most primitive fashion, and it is useless to attempt to introduce innovations. The men will not tolerate new methods. In making sluices for the passage of water from pan with English gaiters. His appearance in to pan and from the larger canals they cannot be induced to use any other implement than their toes.

The salt, as it is collected, is piled up into pyramids about 30 feet square at the base and rising to a height of about 50 feet, and for at least 20 miles before reaching Cadiz and traveling by rail the traveler is struck by the sight of hundreds and hundreds of these pyramids wherever the eye can reach. At night the glistening pyramids form a scene at once fantastical and imposing.

The whole of the salt business is in the hands of the salt workers, from the gathering of the salt to the putting of it into the holds of the ships. Dock laborers and harbor men who do all other kinds of loading or unloading are excluded. The salt workers have their own special craft for carrying the salt from the pans to the barbor.

The process of ralt loading is curious. The ships' holds are lined with matting, and as soon as the si ip is ready to take in salt the craft come longside laden to the gunwale. A sheet of canvas is then put down from the ships hold to the small craft alongside, and the men, with their special wooden shovel start throwing up salt. Naturally a ship of 300 to 400 tons in ballast is very high out of the water, and to see the men at work would give one the impression that as much salt falls back as is being thrown up. Nevertheless the ship is laden in an in credibly short time and ready for sed, notwithstanding this primitive and ap parently absurd process of loading.

Every animal doctors itself says Mc-Call's Magazine. Dogs and cats, when not feeling well, eat medical plants, the dog selecting spear grass and the cat showing preference for valerian. They vary this treatment with an occasional dose of ashes or cinders, just as the crocodile, lizard and some birds swallow gravel and stones

The elephant uses its trunk cleverly in dressing wounds, and by this means applies water, dust or mud to the injury. Sir Samuel Baker, the famous big game hunter, saw an elephant plaster up a bullet wound with mud and frequently observed the readiness with which small res were attended to. Fierce, carnivorous animals, when trapped, often act as surgeons and bite through a limb to free themselves. Rabbits, when wounded, barrow into the ground and lie so that the wound touches the raw earth,

A Structural Worker's Yarn. But hear the iron men and their own stories. A group of them sat one night in my presence and spun yarns.

"Out on the Louisville bridge," said John as he took a fresh puff of his cigar, "the false work suddenly gave way. The false work, you know" (to me) "is the temporary wood bracing we work upon while building. The men below could see it buckling; the fellers on top knew when they started to work on it in the morning that it wasn't safe. All at once, as I say, it went. One of the fellers made a jump for the river. It was 200 feet down, but he tried it. As he jumped he interlocked his legs (he had on big, heavy boots). Those boots' weight carried him down feet and wasn't hurt at all. A few days later he was out walking, slipped, fell three feet and broke a leg. That's true. I knew the man."—Leslie's Monthly.

The Storekeepers' association, of Waverley, are laying plans for a series of entertainments to be given during the winter in Waverley hall, the proceeds of which will be used to defray the expension of the content of penses of the concerts another season. In this way all the auditors of the concerts will have an opportunity to aid an enterprise which doubtless will be largely patronized.

We would suggest that the Metropolitan Park commissioners be asked to erect an inexpensive rustic refreshment pavilion in Beaver Brook reservation, which would be more in keeping with the general artistic arrangement than the booths which have been used this year. booths which have been used this year. The Concord & Boston Street Railway Co. have been doing a good business, especially in view of the fact that it is a new route, hardly well advertised as yet, we feel safe in saying from careful observation that the majority of the residents desire the extension to the Boston & Maine tracks, to be asked for at the hearing Sept 2, and we hope the citizens will make it a point to be present at the hearing and give voice in the matter.
